Arabic phrasebook

The following phrasebook deals with Modern Standard Arabic. See the Egyptian Arabic phrasebook, Jordanian Arabic phrasebook, Moroccan Arabic phrasebook, Lebanese Arabic phrasebook, or Tunisian Arabic phrasebook for Arabic dialects relating to those countries and regions.

Arabic (العَرَبِيَّة al-‘arabiyyah) is a group of Semitic dialects spoken by more than 420 million people, mainly in North Africa and the Middle East. Modern Standard Arabic (MSA), known in Arabic as al-Fusha (الفُصْحَى), is the official form of the language throughout the Arab world, and is very similar to Classical Arabic, the language of the Qur'an and the liturgical language for 1.6 billion Muslims around the world. Arabic has also strongly influenced many languages, including unrelated ones, throughout the Islamic world.

For communication purposes while traveling and using this guide, it is very important to note the differences between MSA and dialects since they are largely mutually unintelligible. Well-educated people will generally be able to understand MSA, but usually respond in their local dialects. Comprehension of dialects between different regions will drop significantly. It is therefore recommended that travelers focus on learning the relevant dialect for their destination for spoken communication, while using MSA as a written reference. That said, news broadcasts will almost always be in MSA.

Pronunciation guide

Arabic script is written in a cursive script, even in print. Most letters change their shapes depending on their position (initial, medial or final). The Arabic script is an abjad, not an alphabet, meaning that only the consonants are written out, and the vowels are usually omitted.

Dialectal pronunciations differ significantly between regions, but here the standard literary pronunciation is described, with notes on dialectal differences where applicable:

- | | |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • a like hat and sometimes father (IPA: /a/) • aa (ا) is a longer version of a (IPA: /aː/) • b (ب) as in English • t (ت) as in English • th (ث) as in English thin (IPA: /θ/) • j (ج) as in jam (IPA: /dʒ/) (Gulf, Algeria), s as in measure (IPA: /ʒ/) (Levant, North Africa), g as in give (Egypt). Unlike other letters, this one has multiple literary standard pronunciations that differ by region. • H (ح) is a pharyngeal fricative sound at the back of the throat (IPA: /ħ/). It sounds like you are about to whisper the word hello. • kh (خ) as in Scots loch or German Bach (IPA: /x/) • d (د) as in English • dh (ذ) as in English them (IPA: /ð/) • r (ر) rolled like Italian or Spanish pero or perro. • z (ز) as in English • s (س) as in English • sh (ش) as in English (IPA: /ʃ/) • S (ص) like s but with the back of the throat constricted (IPA: /sˤ/) | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • D (ض) like d but with the back of the throat constricted (IPA: /dˤ/). Same vowel changes as S • T (ط) like t but with the back of the throat constricted (IPA: /tˤ/) • Z (ظ) varies: like dh or z but with the back of the throat constricted. (IPA: /ðˤ~zˤ/) • ' (ع) A voiced version of H. (IPA: /ʕ/) • gh (غ) a fricative sound at the back of the throat (IPA: /ɣ/) or kh while using the voice box. • f (ف) as in English • q (ق) like an unaspirated k but further back in the throat (IPA: /q/) in the standard literary pronunciation, but often pronounced like a glottal stop (IPA: /ʔ/), or g (IPA: /g/) in the eastern Arabian peninsula and Libya. • k (ك) as in English • l (ل) as in English, but often not pronounced when followed by a "d" or "sh" initial • m (م) as in English • n (ن) as in English • h (ه) as in English • w (و) as English we; as a vowel uu: as English boot; also o: close to English more (IPA: /oː/). • y (ي) as English yes; as a vowel ii: as English bee; also ai: close to English main (IPA: /eː/). • ' (ء آ إ ئ) as in Cockney bottle. A glottal stop (IPA: /ʔ/). |
